NJFC Hosts Timely Loss Prevention Conference

TRENTON, NJ – October 11, 2018 – The New Jersey Food Council (NJFC), in partnership with the New Jersey Retail Merchants Association (NJRMA), will host the 2018 Loss Prevention Conference and Exhibition at Forsgate Country Club in Monroe Township on Thursday, November 1.

Linda Doherty, President & CEO of NJFC, explains the event tackles all aspects of loss prevention, ensuring security professionals understand all the latest trends in asset protection to preserve and protect company resources. In addition, awards will be presented to individuals and law enforcement officials committed to the field of loss prevention.

Doherty said, “With the overwhelming amount of dark threats targeting the retail community, loss prevention professionals will find this year’s conference to be insightful and full of new information that will greatly benefit their businesses.”

The event offers a number of compelling presentations, including an eye opening account of the significant threats of organized retail crime, emerging technologies, asset protection, active shooter scenarios, and the impact of the Regional Automated Property Information Database (RAPID) on the retail community.

Scott Dougherty, Vice President of Loss Prevention for Saker ShopRites, Inc. will accept the “NJFC Loss Prevention Professional Award.” David Wallace, LP Analyst for Staples, Inc. will accept the “NJRMA Loss Prevention Professional Award”. “Retail Law Enforcement Achievement Awards” will be given to FBI Special Agent Csapo and Somerset County Detective Jeff VanderGoot.
